Fate of Creek Street Hangs in the Balance

That the possibility of building a street over the creek between Webster street and Broadway is onw very remote is the opinion expessed by the board of trustees after hearing opinions of the various interested property owners Monday evening. The board expressed itself as being strongly in favor of the proposed improvement with reservations, an less a majority of the property holders in the block were favorable to the project that the board would not go ahead with the proceedings.

After hearing from all of the property owners present the board found that three were for the project, three were opposed to it, three others were in favor of the improvement with esevations, another non-commital, and six others were not present. Mayor Beeger stated that these six must be counted as against the project, as he stated, they would have been present if they had been in favor of the street.

When all the property holders had been given an opportunity to speak, the board decided that the only action that could be taken was to grant the permit for the construction of a building on Broadway which has been held up since August. All of the trustees expressed regret that the project could not be put through, and expressed the opinion that the property owners in time would regret not having made the improvement. In order that no chance should be missed for making the improvement, although they were practically sure that the street would not be built, the board delayed the final granting of a permit to John Munday to build a building on his property on Broadway.

New Scheme Is Surprise to Booze Venders

Finger Prints Cause Downfall

Sheriff J. J. McGrath pulled a new one from his bag of tricks last Friday to the purprise of a number of alleged bootleggers who were preparing to plead not guilty in the court of Judge Edward McAuliffe to a charge of selling liquor. Expecting the customary evidence of undercover agents, the accused had secured an attorney and were stout in their denials of having sold liquor.

Then Undersheriff Farrell, the finger print expert of Sheriff McGrath's office was called, and appeared with photographs of fingerprints taken from the bottles of liquar confiscated in the raid. The surprise was too much for the bootleggers, and they were unanimous in the pleas of guilty.

Four of the men, B. Servetto, Michael Martini, Bill Yount and Jack Resta were sentenced at the time to pay fines of $500 which he did. Rinaldo Piolno of Colma was sentenced to serve 250 days in jail. On Monday John Olvore was sentenced to pay a fine of $500.

The remainder of the men were sentenced yesterday.

Two more of those who had plead guilty appeared for sentence yesterday. One A. Ferrenzi paid a fine of $500. Louis Maggi asked that sentence be postponed for thirty days and this stay was granted by Judge McAuliffe.

On Wednesday evening a posse of federal officers raided the Fly Trap Inn at Five Points and arrested John Uglieno. He plead guilty to the charge before Justice of the Peace McAuliffe immediately at his house and was fined $500.

ROAD CROSSING AS SAFETY MOVE

Board Accepts Plans For Highway Subway

Plans for a subway under the highway between Broadway and James street were submitted to the board of trustees Monday evening by City Engineer C. L. Dimmitt. Dimmitt had prepared the plans and specifications upon the request of the board at a previous meeting.

The subway as planned would cost approximately $16,000. It would be eight feet high and the floor would be 16 feet beneath the surface of the roadway. The entrances would be of ornamental iron and covered with glass. That on the west would be on the property of the Sequoia Union High School, and land for the eastern portal has been offered to the town by Trustee D. R. Stafford. The subway is intended to care for the many children who must cross the highway several times a day in attending the new McKinley school and the high school.

Dimmitt's plans were found satisfactory by the board of trustees, and the project will be presented to the people with other bond issues this summer.

MRS. HAMMERSON PAID LAST TRIBUTE

The passing of Mrs. Sarah Hammerson on Friday last removed a pioneer woman from earthly scenes, one who had spent much of her life in Menlo Park, where she came as a young woman forty-four years ago from her home in England with her husband, William Hammerson, a stalwart blacksmith.

Since the demise of her husband several years ago, Mrs. Hammerson spent her declining years with her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Poole, wife of Supervisor J. W. Poole of the Third township of San Mateo county. She had been confined to her apartments for months, suffering considerably and while her death was not wholly unexpected, nevertheless it was a great shock to her family and friends of whom she had many, gained by her numerous acts of kindness and meriterious deeds during her long and useful life in the community.

The funeral on Monday was laregly attended by old acquaintances. Rev. W. A. Brewer of Burlingame performed the ceremonies at the funeral. They were short and simple in accordance with the wishes of the deceased. Interment was in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

Mrs. Hammerson was widely known in Menlo Park where her children were born and where she passed the golden hours of her life in rearing her sons and daughters and aiding her husband. Mr. Hammerson predeceased his wife several years ago. He loved the open spaces, and was fond of outdoor sports. Every holiday found him whipping the streams of the county for trout or on the marshes in search of the coy mallard or on the foot hills hunting the warry quail. Even in his old days he pursued this sport.

Mr. Hammerson in days before the advent of the automobile and when old Dobbins was in evidence shod the horses of the Feltons, Floods, Hopkins and racers from the Stanford stock farm. He was an expert shoer and enjoyed a big business from the vast estates in and around Menlo Park. He was a personal friend of the late Senator C. N. Felton, who remembered the horseshoer in his will. Like his wife Mr. Hammerson was held in high esteem by all who knew im.

Mrs. Hammerson belonged to another day and age. In her reminescent moods she delighted to tell of the happy by-gone days in Menlo Park which held for her many fond memories.

The good woman is survived by two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Poole, Redwood City, Mrs. Rose Nelson, San Francisco, and two sons, Percy Hammerson, San Francisco, and William Hammerson, Redwood City.

A. C. Argo, principal of the Sequoia High School, will explain the purposes to the two bond issues which will be voted upon February 7, at a meeting of the Woodside Parent Teachers Association to be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. All who are interested in this matter are invited to attend.

Site of Fire House Cause of Discussion

The proposition of building a new fire house to serve that section of town west of the highway occupied the attention of the board of trustees for a good part of the regular Monday evening meeting this week. The matter was brought before the board by a committee representing the affiliated Improvement Clubs of Redwood City, including the Redwood City Improvement Club, the Greater Redwood Improvement Association and the South Redwood Improvement Club.

The committee read a formal protest against the placing of the new fire house at the site proposed by the board, at the corner of Brewster and Myrtle streets, but requested that it be placed at Jeffesson and Myrtle instead. The petition stated that the site suggested would serve a more densely populated territory where the houses were of cheaper type and less fireproof in construction than in the territory surrounding the Brewster site. Several members of the committee spoke in favor of the petition.

Mayor Beeger explained that before any action had been taken in regard to selecting a site for the proposed building, that the board had requested the fire department to furnish a recommennation for a first and second choice. The first choice of the committee from the fire department, he said, was that at Brewster and Myrtle. The Jefferson avenue site had been selected as the next best choice. Not only had the present needs of the city been taken into account, Beeger stated, but that the estimated rates of growth had been considered and the location selected with this in mind.

When asked by the committee what the site at Myrtle and Brewster street would cost, Mayor Beeger stated that the city had an option on the property at $2850 for the two lots, and that the Redwood City School District was to pay $1600 of the cost of whatever site was selected in return for the closing by the city of certain streets in the property occupied by the new McKinley School.

Mayor Beeger stated that the school district had offered a site for the fire house on a tract of land in Eagle Hill owned by the district but that the city had declined this site as the cost of excavating the property would have been greater that the cost of the two lots now under consideration. Beeger stated, however, that all recommendations for sites must be sanctioned by the fire department, and that the final location of the building would be upon the recommendation of the fire department as the matter was immaterial to the board but of great importance to the fire chief and hi smen.

Local Boy to Get Footbail Award

With January 25 set as the tentative date for the awarding of the "Red" Grange most valuable man in league trophy to Frank Burger, San Mateo fullback, one Sequoian, Fred Danz, star of two seasons of football at Sequoia, is looking forward to the date with considerable anxiety, for he will be recognized with a watch charm in the form of a gold football along with three other peninsula gridiron men. The others are Orvall Condray, Burlingame; "Buck" Weller, Palo Alto, and Ed Riley, San Jose.

The trophy was donated by five newspapers of the peninsula, including the Redwood City Tribune, Palo Alto Times, San Mateo Times, San Jose News and Burlingame Advance.

New Directors Elected By Chamber of Com.

Nine members of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce were elected as directors of that organization at the annual business meeting of the chamber held at the Episcopal parish house Monday evening. The new directors elected at that time are Carl Beeger, Emmett Donneley, Edward Harrison, L. A. Heiner, E. B. Hinman, Sam Winklebieck, P. E. Brand Carl Stoner and D. R. Stafford. The first meeting of the new board will be held tonight, at which time a president will be selected.

The chairman of the meeting was Emmett Donnelly. The chief speaker of the evening was L. O. Head, chairman of the industrial committee of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce. He spoke on the industrial development of San Francisco and of the peninsula.

Other speakers were A. C. Argo, principal of the Sequoia Union High School, who spoke in favor of the bond issue to be presented for the enlargement of that institution, John Daley, president of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce, E. B. Hinman, Mark Ryan and Mrs. A. S. Kalenborn.

The annual report of the president as read by President D. R. Stafford and the secretary, Mrs. Amy Holmes read her annual report. A resolution urging the granting of a franchise to the Bayshore Freight Lines was passed.

Main Street Store Entered by Robbers

The men's furnishing store on Main street until recently conducted by Louis Cotte, and now by Albert Baer, was entered by Burglars early Saturday morning and goods reported to be worth about $3000 were stolen. Baer states that 50 suits of clothing were taken and 18 overcoats as well as other goods.

The robbers made their entrance by means of a side window, and took the stolen goods off in a car which they had driven into a lot at one side of the store. They were seen just as they were leaving by the watchman at the Main street S. P. crossing, and he reported the case to the Redwood City police.

WILL CONTEST SETTLEMENT MADE BY ARGEEMENT

The contest over the R. P. Hurlbut estate has been settled by an agreement filed in the office of Elizabeth M. Kneese yesterday. By the terms of the settlement, Edward H. Hurlbut, the contestant, receives lot 2, Black 24, San Carlos, and portions of lots 1, 19, and 20 in the same block. He withdraws from the contest and dismisses his suit and Mrs. Muriel C. McVeigh, formerly Muriel Fisher, secures the remainder of the estate and is permitted to probate the will.

Mary C. Hurlbut died on April 12, 1927, leaving a will bequeathing her entire estate to her daughter, Mrs. McVeigh. R. P. Hurlbut, her husband had previously deede his property to his wife. Hurlbut passed away the following May. He had become incompetent and his son, Edward H. Hurlbut, was appointed his guardian. Shortly afterwards the son filed the contest which promised to be bitterly fought in court by the contestant who claimed that his stepmother, Mary C. Hurlbut, had secured the property from his father by undue influence. Mrs. Hurlbut denied this statement. Mrs. McVeigh was a daughter of Mary C. Hurlbut by another marriage.

R. P. Hurlbut was a pioneer contractor of San Francisco who erected many of the new structures after the fire in 1906. He settled in Wellesley Jark at an early date.

Clarence W. Morris is the attorney for the executrix of the estate.

BAY CHANNEL RECOMMENDED

Bay Development Seen In Engineer's Report

The recommendation of Major-General Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers to the House of Representatives that a ship channel be built to this city, is considered as a big step forward in the development of the southern part of the bay.

The proposed channel would be thirty feet deep and 300 feet wide, and its cost was estimated at $52,000. Half of the expense would be borne by local interests.

The project has been urged for some time by the Alaska fish packing industry, the cement interests of the peninsula and Redwood City.

A survey of the proposed channel was completed five months ago by army engineers, Colonel Thomas A. Jackson, head of the United Engineering Department in San Francisco, stated yesterday.

Another plan submitted to Washington called for a channel five feet deep.

In case favorable action is taken by the present Congress, an appropriation for the construction may be made at the next session if the usualy procedure is followed, it was pointed out.

PAPERS USED FOR COUNTY'S HISTORY

New History of County Written By Local Man

A history of San Mateo county compiled and written by Roy W. Cloud of this city has been published and is being delivered this week to those who subscribed to the work. The history is contained in two volumes, the first devoted to the history proper and the second to biographies of some of the prominent people of the county.

A large part of the material in the history was secured from the files of the Times-Gazette which exist from 1859 to the present time. The old files contain history which has never appeared in any other form, and from this source the author of the new history was able to glean facts not before found in a history of this section.

Roy W. Cloud, the author, is secretary of the State Teachers' Assoriation, and is a well-known authority on early California history, and particularly that of this section of the state.

PROTEST SIDEWALK OMISSION IN FRONT OF FOLEY PROPERTY

A petition signed by a number of property owners of Jefferson avenue requesting that sidewalk be laid in front of the Foley property on that street was received by the board of trustees Monday evening. The petition was presented to the board by Charles Ward.

Ward had appeared at the previous meeting of the board to protest against the omission of the Foley property from the property on Jefferson avenue in front of which sidewalks were to be laid. The board explained that this property had been omitted because of the fact that the creek here comes close to the road and that it was thought dangerous to have the sidewalk so close to the creek, but stated, however, that if the majority of property owners of the district included in the improvement petitioned to have this property included, that the board would have sidewalks laid.

Upon the reception of the petition Mayor Beeger restated the reasons for the omission of the property but said that the board would confer with the owners of the property and endeavor to have them lay the sidewalk by private contract with the same contractor who was laying the other sidewalks of the district. If this was not satisfactory to them the board promised that the work would be done by improvement proceedings.

WILL ADDRESS AMERICAN LEGION MONDAY EVE

Local Highways Named for State Appropriation

With the budget adopted and all difficulties between the north and south ironed out as a result of the 50-50 split in new construction funds, the State Highway Commission this week actually launched the great two-year road building program.

Under the commission's policy, work will be rushed on a dozen main line projects included among the 45 highways listed in the record-breaking program.

The San Francisco to San Diego Highway, one of the major jobs scheduled, will receive early attention, with approximately $846,000 listed for expenditure on sections of this route in Santa Clara, Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Venture and Orange counties.

Another main line that will be rushed is the Saramento to Los Angeles Highway, with some $2,800,000 provided for expenditure in Fresno, Madera, Los Angeles, Merced, Tulare, Kern, San Joaquin, Sacramento and Stanislaus counties.

Sharing importance with these two big projects, about $1,444,000 will be spent on the Sacramento to Oregon line via Marysville, with Tehama, Shasta, Siskiyou, Sacramento, Placer counties participating in the benefits of the work.

In the south, one of the first major projects to receive consideration will be the San Fernando to San Bernardino job, $1,337,000 having been provided for this work in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties. San Bernardino to El Centro highway is likewise on the early schedule, while $950,00 is available for pushing the San Diego to El Centro highway construction in Imperial and San Diego counties.

San Francisco Bayshore and Skyline boulevard will receive early consideration in the bay district, $970,500 available for the former and $300,000 for the Skyline.

Alaskan Tales Told Clubmen By J. W. Poole

"There are strange things done in the midnight sun
By the men who moil for gold;
The Arctic trails have their secret tales
That would make your blood run cold."

Tales of the frozen Klondike and of the mad rush for gold which swept this country off its feet thirty years ago, as had the rush to California fifty years before that, were told to members of the Redwood City Exchange Club Tuesday evening by John W. Poole.

Poole left here with a dozen or more men of this city thirty years ago, and spent several years in the artic. The experiences of those years, hard and distressing at the time, make interesting tales with a perspective of thirty years, and the talk by the local man was listened to with great interest by the club.

Earl Rush and his "hay wire" orchestra furnished no little amount of melody and amusement for the occasion.

The chairman of the evening was Wilbur Doxsee.

FATAL HIGHWAY CRASH TO RESULT IN PROBE

The blame for a highway crash which resulted in the death of one man and the injury of several other persons will be given a complete investigation by the office of District Attorney Swart as soon as those who were injured have recovered sufficiently to testify at the inquest of the one who was killed.

The accident occured at the corner of Broadway and the highway in this city Saturday night when a car driven by E. O. Miller of San Francisco collided with a P. R. T. bus driven by A. J. Azevedo. In the car with Miller were T. U. Hannigan, a jewelry salesman of San Francisco who was killed, Glen Gould of Novato, Miss Connie Mack of San Francisco, Miss Marcella Davis of San Francisco and another woman who slipped away without giving her name.

The accident was investigated by Officers Genochio, Douglass and Schneider of the local police force. The police were told by witnesses that the car driven by Miller was swinging from one side of the road to the other and that it was on the left hand side of the road at the time it struck the bus.

The injured were treated for cuts and bruises at the Community hospital. Except for Hannigan, the most seriously injured was the driver. It was thought at first that he would die from the injuries received, but his condition is now reported to be improved.

NEW PUPILS REGISTERING

LARGE INCREASE IN HIGH SCHOOL CLASSES

Facilities Being Taxed To Capacity

An increase of over 78 students at Sequoia Union High School caused by the entrance of freshmen and transfers at the beginning of the new semester on Monday, January 16, was announced by A. C. Argo, principal.

These new freshmen have registered for the following available subjects: English and general science are required, and two periods each of these subjects will be given. There is then left a choice of band and orchestra, or choral. This program is so arranged that these entering students may complete a full year's work in half a school year or one semester.

Any of the new students who have unusual ability will be allowed to sign up for a class in California history. This is to be an elective subject.

With the entering freshmen will come two more teachers to take care of this increase in students. The teachers are Miss Grace Cochran and Miss Georgia L. Clark. Miss Cochran is a gaduate of the University of California. She has been teaching for the past three years in Orosi High School, Orosi, California. Miss Cochran's classes will be freshmen English. There will be five of these.

Miss Clark is a graduate of the University of California. Her graduate work was done at Stanford university. "She belongs to several college honor societies," states Mr. Argo, principal. Miss Clark's classes will be freshmen general science, and she will teach six of these.

"With the incoming students added to already crowded conditions, the administration is having difficulty in arranging class rooms and laboratory facilities for the new classes. The two new teachers will be added to the two who now have regular class rooms," states Mr. Argo.

The following are the members of the entire freshman class:

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The Tehama county Board of Supervisors last week agreed to provide $25,000, to be matched by $75,000 in Federal funds, in constructing a highway which will open up the Lassen Volcanic National Park, it was announced by Bert B. Meeks, State director of public works.

California's deaths from automobile crashes are mounting. This is shown in figures compiled by the department of vital statistics of the State board of health. Complete reports for the first nine months of 1927 shows the motor car had snuffed out 1,224 lives before October 1. This exceeds by seventy-eight the nine-month total for 1926, which set a record for fatalities, and is greater than the deaths for the entire year of 1922.

The First National Research Society of America was formed last week at Los Angeles with the announcement that it will "conduct an international inquiry into the wholesale tobacco poisoning of infants born to and nursed at the breasts of cigarette smoking mothers." This alleged "poisoning," the society declared in submitting incorporation papers from Los Angeles to the Secretary of State, "is believed to be increasing in prevalence with the universal addiction of women to cigarettes."

S. H. Kress and Company, national merchandising corporation, acting through Attorney Sylvester J. McAtee of San Francisco, last week purchased the Hornlein Building at Eighth and K streets, Sacramento from Mrs. Max Hornlein of Sacramento for $300,000. The announcement of the transaction indicated the Kress Company contemplates erection of a large store on the site upon expiration of present leases.

Award of a contract to the Shell Oil company of California for approximately 300,000 barrels of fuel oil needed at California's several hospitals, prisons and corrective schools during the calendar year, was announced recently by State Purchasing Agent McMillin. The oil will be distributed to the institutions for 93 cents a barrel at the shipping points, a price 6 cents below the prevailing market. The State also is assured that it will benefit from any decrease.

The city council of Martinez, county seat of Contra Costo county, is willing that Martinez be classed in the San Francisco metropolitan area, but they wish it understood that their city is resigning none of its rights as an individual corporation, its members announced at Martinez last week. Permission in include Martinez in the metropolitan area was sought recently during compilation of population figures. Martinez has a population of about 8,000.

A reduction of $14,000,000 in California's annual forest fire losses during the past thirty-seven years, due directly to the development of an adequate patrol system, is claimed by Fred G. Stevenot, State director of natural resources, and State Forester M. B. Pratt in a report to Governor C. C. Young. The two State officials delve into dusty tomes to unearth the first report of a State forestry board back in 1890, when the State's patrol system consisted of a few rangers employed to "post fire notices." In that year, the report shows, California's fire losses are estimated at $15,000,000.

Authorizations of $252,323,193 in public utility securities during 1927 by the California Railroad Commission in the form of stocks, bonds, notes and other evidences of indebtedness, exceeds the total of any other year by nearly $100,000,000, Leon O. Whitsell, president of the commission, reports. That the commission is exercising a real and vital supervision over all public utility security issues for which its sanction is sought, is proved, Whitsell points out, by the fact that since the commission's organization it has denied applications to issue $109,580,580, and dismissed applications to issue $116,557,541 in addition.

The first automobile tire produced from rubber grown in the United States is on display at Salinas this week in the office of the Salinas Chamber of Commerce. All the rubber used in the tire was extracted from Guayule shrubs grown in California by the American Rubber Products, Inc., which maintains its experimental laboratories and nearly 2,000 acres of land near Salinas. More than 800 acres of the shrubs have been planted, and enough seedings to plant 2,200 more acres are available. Present plans of the company call for planting of thousands of additional acres in various parts of the State. Officials say that the rubber can be produced cheaper in California than on the huge plantations of the company in Sumatra.

The three major industrial resources of Grass Valley—mining, farm stock and tourist-travel—have seldom been more promising at the beginning of a year than at the portal of 1928. This condition is reflected in greater building activity within the City of Grass Valley than has existed for many years. Gold mining, the historical industry at Grass Valley, appears to be in a healthy condition with some prospect of the coming of new operators with new capital to carry out very extensive consolidations and developments.

California's new highway construction budget for the present biennium, involving expenditures of approximately $15,100,000 in gasoline tax revenues specifically designated for primary road building, is to be worked out by the State highway commission and Bert B. Meek, director of public works, at a meeting in Sacramento this week. The commission, it was announced last week, will apportion to the various routes and section of the State all income expected from the one cent gasoline tax voted by the last legislature to finance new construction.

Opening of a new diagnostic center at Palo Alto, Calif., was announced last week by the Veterans' Bureau at Washington. Like the ones at Cincinnati and Mt. Alto, Washington, the Palo Alto hospital will be manned by highly specialized medical officers.

Two records were established by the monoplane Spirit of California in its recent endurance flight, at San Francisco, even though it failed in its attempt for a new sustained flight record, according to assertions made by Frank Flynn, superintendent of Mills Airport at San Francisco. Flynn reported to the Board of Supervisors that the plane has established a new mark for sustained flight among ships of its type and that it has carried aloft the heaviest useful load ever lifted by heavier than-tir craft.

Both cities and states are falling into line in the movement for adoption of uniform traffic laws and regulations, reports the California State Automobile Association which is sponsoring the uniform code for California cities in the northern and central part of the state. The Automobile Club of Southern California is leading this movement in the south and a total of fifty-three cities in the state now have the standardized code of regulations in effect.

California's most prominent realtor, Governor C. C. Young, will be the guest of honor of the San Francisco Real Estate Board, January 24, at the first luncheon meeting of the local organization in the new year. The meeting will be held in the concert room of the Palace Hotel. Alexander R. Heron, chairman of the State Board of Control, will also appear on the program along with Governor Young as one of the speakers of the day. Charles E. Street Jr. is chairman of arrangements.

It's all right for the maids and matrons of California to strive for that "svelte-like lissomeness," but they're foolish if they fall for the "fads and fallacies of reducing." That's the gist of a claim made last week by M. E. Jaffa, chief of the State bureau of foods and drugs, in an attack on "obesity cures" often tried out with serious results, he said, by "women who imagine they weight too much." Seven among the "most prominent fads and fallacies in nutrition" were listed by the State health official as follows: The vitamin fad, the bread fad, the reducing fad, the sour milk fad, the vegetarian fad, the bran and roughage fad and the no meat fad.

Charles G. Dunwoody, prominent in the campaign for conservation of California forests, left last week for Washington, D. C., where he will urge Congress to meet the forestry needs of the State. California forestry leaders are asking that Congress appropriate funds for immediate work on the State forest experiment station, for maintenance of Lassen Volcanic National Park, and for war on the white pine beetle.

C. E. McLaughlin of Sacramento, former appellate judge and a leader in administration of California penitentiary affairs for many years was reappointed by Governor C. C. Young last week for a six-year term on the State board of prison directors. This was reliably reported in capitol political circles where it was said that the governor's policy will be to maintain control of the two State prisons in the hands of men who are fully experienced in the government of penal institutions.

Reporting that only twenty-seven banks have been found in a financial condition warranting suspension during the last eighteen and a half years, Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of Banks, declared last week that California occupies a "position of preeminence in the field of sound banking." The value of the total resources of the twenty-seven suspended banks was given as $11,270,521.14, and the total capital investment was announced as $2,359,869.30.

Just a little over two weeks remains for California motorists to comply with the State law and secure new license plates for 1928. Renewal registration closes at midnight January 31, warns George S. Grant, manager of the California State Automobile Association license issuance service, in a statement issued last week. The law requires that those who have not secured their plates during the time allowed must pay double the usual fee, making the passenger car owner pay $6 instead of $3.

California's method of legal execution by hanging is far from costly, officials at San Quentin declared last week. It is one of the things that has become less expensive with the passage of years. A fee of $25, paid to the hangman, is the chief item. In years past he received $50, which he shared with guards on the death watch. The State pays $2.50 for the hemp noose, a new one being used for each execution after being stretched for months. Interment in the prison cemetery entails an expense of $2.50 for a coffin made in the furniture factory, which is not necessary if the body is claimed by relatives.

One hundred school teachers and school executives will come to California about the middle of March for a month's tour. This was announced at Mexico City by Dr. C. N. Thomas of San Jose, Calif. Dr. Thomas is director general of the International Council for Educational Progress. Dr. Thomas went to Mexico to invite the Mexican department of education to send a party of Mexican teachers to California as guests of groups of California educators. The purpose of the tour is to cultivate friendship between Mexico and the United States.

Three hundred and twenty-one new oil wells were begun in Kern county during the year just ended, according to figures just released by the State oil and gas supervisor. There were 324 tests for water shutoff and 255 deepening for redrilling jobs. Of this number 74 wells were abandoned for various causes.

When the State board of prison directors meets at San Quentin Prison this month it will be confronted with the task of passing on the parole applications of seventy-one convicts, nine of whom are slayers, five serving life sentences.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Hoover Strong

THE time has arrived when the people of the state of California should organize on behalf of Herbert Hoover in order to advance his candidacy for the Presidency. His chances are excellent to secure the Republican nomination at Kansas City next June. This one opportunity, that may never come again, knocks at the door of the state. Shall we heed this call or will we lie supinely and let the chances for having a chief executive from California in the White House slip by?

While it is true that Mr. Hoover is certain of the California delegation to the convention, yet the campaign should be carried beyond the confines of the Golden State and into other localities where delegates are to be chosen. Everyone having friends in the east should write them on behalf of the candidacy of Mr. Hoover. Speakers should go forth telling the people of other states of the greatness and competency of Mr. Hoover who has a national and internatioanl reputation for honesty, integrity and ability. He is just the one man of all our statesmen to take up the burdens to be laid down next year by President Coolidge. But we must organize a plan of campaign that will be effectual, that will bring results and be the means of securing the coveted nomination for California's favorite son.

The Times-Gazette was the first paper in the state to advocate the nomination of Mr. Hoover for the presidency when it became certain that Mr. Coolidge would not run, and after he had sent out his famous, "I do not choose to be a candidate for president in 1928." The article was widely read and commented upon by the press throughout California at the time. Since then the candidacy of Mr. Hoover has advanced to such a condition that it is almost certain now that he will be the choice of the Kansas convention.

During the week Senator Samuel M. Shortridge stood on the floor of the senate at Washington, and openly declared that Herbert Hoover would be the next president of the United State. The senator is in close touch with national events and knows whereof he speaks. He was loudly applauded, which demonstration showed the feeling of the senators towards the popular secretary of commerce. He is the people's choice for president and is growing in popularity day by day. His nomination would be the equivalent to an election.

It would be a big feather in the cap of California to have a favorite son in the White House, one who knows its best interests and one who would reflect credit on the state by a just and economical administration.

Let the state co-operate and work unceasingly for the nomination of Herbert Hoover for the presidency from now on.

DANGEROUS SITUATION IN FOREIGN INVESTMENTS

It was pointed out in an editorial in the Washington Past that some of this money was lent solvent concerns on the best of security. Much of it, however, was risked in insecure countries and in speculative enterprises. Some of the communities and commercial undertakings that have borrowed money from the United States must make a profit of 12 or 15 per cent a year if they are to meet their obligations. They must be more prosperous than American communities or business concerns.

American investors should be careful to thoroughly investigate foreign bond flotations. Sooner or later one of the big loans may default and then only the investor will be the one to suffer the loss.

It is well to remember that banking interests who negotiate loans to foreign countries do not do so without recompense. Then they sell bonds to the American people after which their responsibilities cease.

Is the question that enters the minds of many as reports of marines killed and wounded in Nicaragua come back to this country and thousands of others are started on their way there. Foreign loans are made at a high rate of interest and the investors should be made to stand the risk.

Representative Garrett said that it was the business of the American Government to protect American lives and property abroad, but that it was not the business of American concerns to stabilize foreign banks and loan money in foreign countries and then send over marines to protect their interests. He said America was not called on to collect private debts abroad. Further, that no one has ever shown in a single instance where the life or property of any American in Nicaragua was endangered and that the administration should make known to the American people just when and how such American life or property was endangered in that country.

The present situation in Nicaragua offers an example of what may often arise in the case of private loans to foreign countries. These are often made with the approval of the State Department and when they become endangered the investors naturally look to the Government to protect them.

Such censoring and approving of foreign loans by the State Department was criticized recently by Senator Glass. He disaproved sending vast quantities of American capital abroad for investment at a high rate of interest when, if the same capital would stay at home where it belongs, it would tend very strongly to reduce the home rate of interest to farmers and small business generally. He stated his intention to introduce a bill at the present session of Congress to correct this evil.

During the year of 1927 nearly two billion American dollars were loaned to foreign countries. The amount of the foreign debt to this country, not counting the war debt, is $15,000,000,000—an almost inconceivable sum.

Interesting Facts Shown in Statistics

BY ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, January 18 — California's Cupid apparently has taken wing for Reno, since the advent of the "gin-marriage law," according to the decline in the state's matrimonial harvest reported today by L. E. Ross, the state's matrimonial statistician, although married couples still put up about the same fight in the light of official divorce figures.

The stork, however, is holding his own in this state, with an appreciable gain over the Grim Reaper of 1330 souls for the year although the latter has lengthened his stride.

While the "feathered friend" chose to deliver 84,000 babies during 1927, a gain of 2,128 births over 1926, the Reaper gathered in 62,200 persons, an increase of 3,458 over the previous ear, says the state statistician.

The birth rate maintained its status quo at 19.9, which represents a high rate among the states of the union. At the same time the death rate crept up slightly from 14.2 to 14.7 during the past twelve months.

Automobiles have become even deadlier peril, Ross stated, exacting a toll of 1725 lives during 1927, a gain of 102 over 1926; at the same time the number of deaths from other violent causes was reduced from 4803, the year before, to 4100 last year.

A great total of 1240 people "did not chose" to live at all during 1927, bringing the already high California suicide rate up to 29.3, a gain of 2.2 per cent over the year before.

But to revert to Dan Cupid, the three-day marriage law, et al:

The state of matrimony went into a sharp decline during the last five months of the old year, following the going into effect of the hesitation wedding law requiring a trio of cooling off days between application for and issuance of license. Lovers, it appeared, will brook no delay and preferring miles to smiles in their home town, hopped to Reno to do their marrying.

Leap year will have a matrimonial deficit of 3,166 carried over from 1927 to offset in 1928, Ross declared, since for the first time in recent years California's marriage barometer has dropped. Wedding bells pealed only 53,498 times duing 1927, compared with 56,664 blushing brides kissed at the altar in 1926.

The normal annual increase in the number of coupes taking off for airpane bungaows, heretofore, has been from 1,000 to 1,500 a year. In this way, 1926 was an average year with a record of 1584 more ring fingers slipping into the marriage circle than reported for the pervious year.

Telling the home folks the plans three days in advance fusses prospective brides and grooms, Ross believes. For there is no other catastrophe to account for the marked falling off in local wedding, in his opinion.

Butter county, however, remained true to Cupid and the law of the state at the same time apparently, as it reported 86 marriages for 1927, a jump of 14 over 1926. Glenn county also gained slightly, its total for 1927 being 75, or one ahead of the preceding year. All but twelve of the 58 counties "went into a decline," matrimonially speaking.

Here are some of the counties that "took the count", maritally under the new three-day "Stop, Look and Listen" act:

Alameda, 4031 marriages, a drop of 532.
Marin, 393, a drop of 176.
San Mateo, 1039, a drop of 75.
Santa Clara, 1739, a drop of 122.
Placer, 146, a drop of 37.
Shasta, 125, a drop of 8.
Colusa, 48, a drop of 18.
Lassen, 70, a drop of 23.
Stanislaus, 459, a drop of 76.
Merced, 298, a drop of 14.
San Diego, 2086, a drop of 370.
Solano, 283, a drop of 76.
Tehema, 103, a drop of 19.
Butte, 257, a drop of 27.

Health Week in March Proposed

A health week to be held sometime in March at Sequoia Union High School, is proposed by a committee of which Miss Anna Neff, social science teacher, is chairman. According to Miss Neff, this health week would be entertaining and beneficial to the students, and would be to popularize health among the students as a whole.

During the week, separate days would be set aside for the inspection of correct shoes, posture, teeth, nails and general health, and each student passing the inspection for any day would receive a tag. Those receiving five tags at the end of the week would be ground and ten boys and the ten girls rating highest out of this number would be subjected to an examination given by several dentists and doctors of Redwood City. Out of this twenty, the three most perfect would be awarded prizes.

AN EVER-PRESENT ENEMY

By Charles H. Chetwood, M. D.
New York City
Member Goras Memorial

The human family is menaced by an ever-present enemy in the form of disease. This enemy employs the very same methods of attack, of invasion, and of inflicting damage that any other enemy might be expected to employ. In making this illustration, the human body may be regarded as a citadel which is being attacked by an invading army. The enemy will enter the besieged precinct by whatever opening it finds, and having made an entry, unless proper measures for protection and counter-attack have been instituted, will get the better of the situation and inflict damage in proportion to the strength of the invasion and its dangerous character. The common ports of entry which which such an enemy can reach the citadel of the human body are trough te air, by water, and by many ways from the ground. In other words, the germs of disease are breathed, swallowed, or inoculated into the blood. Some people make light of the danger of disease transmission from the implantation of germs, but one has only to review the splendid achievements of public health departments in preventing and checking epidemics — the great advantage in protection by vaccination, which has caused an increasing diminution in disease —to realize the magnitude of the scientific knowledge that has been acquired after many years of study.

There is today no such thing as an epidemic of smalpox. Vaccination so widely propagated has reduced the likelihood of an epidemic to a negligible possibility.

Typhoid fever is preventable by protection of the water supply, the isolation of germ carriers, and the employement of preventable vaccines.

Malaria can be prevented by getting rid of all the mosquitoes that carry the disease from man to man.

Some interesting statistics were published regarding the prevention of pneumonia. It is known that the contact infection is a rare one, yet the total umber of cases throughout the country is not small and could be avoided by proper measures of prevention.

The prevention of scarlet fever has recently been along the same lines as the prevention of diptheria, which latter disease has been largely minimized through preventive measures in the form of immunization through the use of serum.

Measles is not generally regarded as a serious malady but, when it is realized that young children in institutions who are victims of this malady die of the complication of lung conditions, it becomes a matter of importance to meet this malady with measures of prevention in order to avert more serious consequences. Hence it has now become the custom of institutions to immunize young children, particularly, by the injection of a little of the blood serum from convalescents.

Other diseases could be mentioned here which have been partially or completely mastered through preventive methods. In the meantime science continues its relentless sarch for new preventive data. The year 1928 will probably see some interesting and vital developments, with the ever-present enemy of disease placed further on the defensive.

SOUNDING THE TOCSIN OF THE SEASON

By H. H. Hines, M. D.
Cincinnati, Ohio
Member Gorgas Memorial

There is a popular delusion concerning drafts, which it is difficult to dispel even from the minds of the very intelligent. It is commonly thought that colds following exposure to drafts are due solely to that cause. They are merely the predisposing cause. Colds are bacterial infections of the respiratory tract. A draft is nothing more than air in motion and is beneficial, not harmful, if properly controlled and provided that the exposed are in good physical condition. The physically unfit who so sedulously avoid air currents within doors could safely ignore the draft bogey if their powers of resistance were developed and increased by hygienic living. Overeating, impure air, lack of proper exercise, insufficient sleep, constipation, an untrained skin due to insufficient or improper bathing, and worry are the prime factors which in varcombinations of unphysiological habits render people unfit to withstand the teeming germ-life which finds lodgment along the respiratory tract.

The mistake is nearly always made of placing the blame for physical disability on only one factor, the correction of which is deemed sufficient to withstand disease. Some will give up certain forms of stimulation of which they had made free use; others deny themselves certain kinds of food thought to be deleterious. Some will take up this, that, and the other health cult devoted to a specific physiological purpose. A well-rounded evenly-balanced regime of hygienic living is what is needed to fortify the system against bronchitis, pneumonia, and tuberculosis as well as diseases of the circulatory and digetive tracts. The ordiary man in ordinary good health does not want to live hygienically. He is satisfied to go along blithely and carelessly, indifferent to the menace of disease which may be just around the corner.. Then he is tripped up and awakened to the mocking realization that his assumed good health was an illusive dream.

To quote a biblical apothegm, 'They that are whole need no physician,' but they who would remain whole should obey the laws of health and right living. The cardinal principles of hygiene are simple, sane and natural. Conscious effort at first is required, but constant observance will lead to the automatic performance of good health habits.

This is the season of the year when pneumonia knocks most insistently at the doors of our lungs, when tuberculosis seeks to overthrow the unfit and unwary. He who would successfully combat them will take stock himself, cease his unwholesome habits, and cultivate the habit of resistance by living the life.

Sequoia Alumni Association to Present Comedy

In choosing "The Patsy" as their play to give on February 24 the Alumni Association, chose a popular modern thre-act comedy which is surpassed by few, if any.

The lines are clever and the "pick" of the alumni have been chosen to enact the parts.

In the auditorium on the night of Saturday, February 18, Al Barnes as Mr. Harrington, will offer much comedy in his witty connection with his fiery wife, May Harrington, played by the experienced Gladys Palmer. The Harrington's have two daughters, who both have parts vital to the entire plot. The younger daughter, Patricia, has a likeable personality which always wins the hearts of those who view the play. This part is well taken by Marie Chabrat. Patricia's older sister is Roger, very beautiful but without the personality that Patricia possesses and cold, except when she is selfish and cold, except when she has a purpose to be pleasant. This interesting part is being played by Beatrice Heydenfeldt. Then there are two boys, Tony Anderson and Billy Caldwell who bring about a whole lot of interesting situations George Cleese is playing Tony, while the part of Billy Caldwell is being taken by Gilbert Findley. Mrs. Woolridge, the director of the pageant given here last May, is coaching "The Patsy." Leroy Dubinsky, ex-stage manager at the high school, is handling the scenery and lighting. Wonderful cooperation has been given by the high school and others already, so that the alumni may be successful in their efforts.

Tickets are now on sale for fifty and seventy-five cents. All seats will be reserved. The higher priced seats will be the first 13 rows in the center section and the first row in the balcony. All seats may be reserved at the high school or at Ryan's Drug Store on or after February 13.

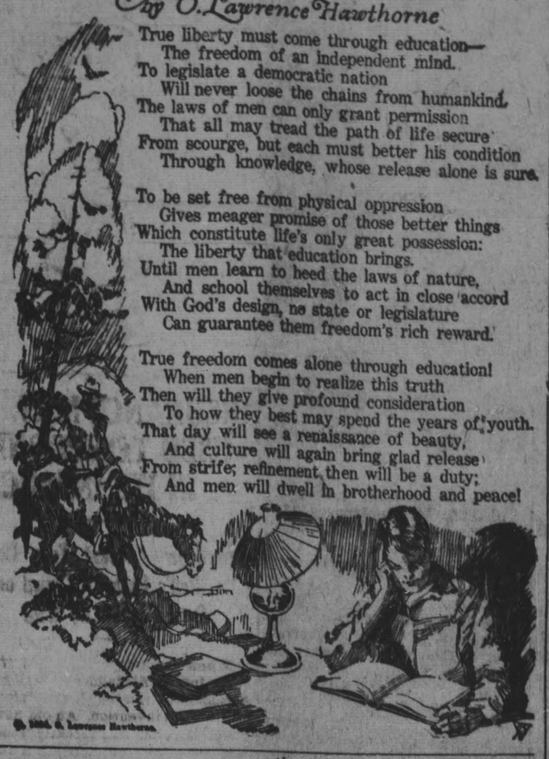
When Men are Free

by D. Lawrence Hawthorne



True liberty must come through education—
The freedom of an independent mind.
To legislate a democratic nation
Will never loose the chains from humankind.
The laws of men can only grant permission
That all may tread the path of life secure
From scourge, but each must better his condition
Through knowledge, whose release alone is sure.

To be set free from physical oppression
Gives meager promise of those better things
Which constitute life's only great possession:
The liberty that education brings.
Until men learn to heed the laws of nature,
And school themselves to act in close accord
With God's design, no state or legislature
Can guarantee them freedom's rich reward.

True freedom comes alone through education!
When men begin to realize this truth
Then will they give profound consideration
To how they best may spend the years of youth.
That day will see a renaissance of beauty,
And culture will again bring glad release
From strife; refinement then will be a duty;
And men will dwell in brotherhood and peace!

High School Seeks Scholarship Funds

The Sequoia Union High School is making a plea for several $200 or $500 scholarships to be awarded to the graduating students having the highest scholarship records. Several $100 scholarships are to be given this year and have been given in years past, but $100 is not a very adequate sum for college expenses. The scholarships are awarded to only those students who deserve them and who need them.

The scholarships offered are two $100 scholarships, one for a girl and one for a boy, offered by the Student Body; one $100 scholarship for a girl offered by the Sequoia Girls Society, and probably one will be given by the faculty for either a boy or a girl. The Student Loan Fund, from which students in financial difficulties may borrow money to aid them in finishing high school, is being given $100 by the Redwood City Woman's Club.

High School Band To Compete for National Contest

Competing for a trip back east to take part in the national school band contest, Sequoia Union High School will enter a state school band contest to be held in the early part of May in San Francisco. The local band, under the direction of Max Gelber, is in class B and will compete with other bands of this class. The winner of this division, together with the winner of Class A, will go east to take part in the national contest held in the latter part of May.

These contests are under the auspices of the committee on instrumental affairs of the music supervisors' national conference. John Philip Sousa, composer of the "Stars and Stripes Forever" and other marches, is the head of an advisory committee, made up of Edwin Franks Goldman; Captain Taylor Bronson, leader of the United States marine band at Washington; Frederick Stock, director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra; and Herbet L. Clark, director of the Municipal band of long Beach, California.

The schools fall into the divisions A, B, C, and D, thus:

Class A—Bands from high schools (grades 9 to 2 inclusive) having an enrollment of 400 or more.

Class B—Bands from high schools or grammar schools which have been organized less than one year.

Mr. Gelber, when interviewed, said concerning the contest, "We can make a good showing, even though it is our first year. The students are keenly interested in the contest and are conscientiously working to do their best."

HAS NATION'S LARGEST RESEARCH LABORATORY

Nearly 2,000 Scientists Engaged in Studying Development of Telephone

The Bell Telephone Laboratories, the research and development agency of the Bell System, is the largest industrial research laboratory in the United States, according to a recent bulletin of the National Research Council. This bulletin lists nearly 1000 industrial research laboratories in the United States, carrying on investigations in electrical, chemical and mechanical and other lines.

The Bell Laboratories are listed as having a staff of about 2000 physicists, chemists, engineers, and others directly concerned with technical activities. The work of this staff includes a large number of investigations in all branches of the electrical communication art. Among these investigations are scientific studies of speech, hearing, magnetic materials, the emission of electrons by hot filaments, and submarine cable phenomena. Also engineering development work on telephone instruments and central office apparatus, telegraph methods and equipment, transmission of pictures, radio telephony, multiplex telephony and telegraphy, and other matters is carried on.

KEPT PRESS IN TOUCH WITH CAVE-IN RESCUE

When Fred Leneau was caught in a cave-in in the bottom of a forty-foot well some three miles from Worcester, Mass., this past summer and was imprisoned there for more than thirty hours before he was released by the combined efforts of employees of the Worcester sewer department and volunteer workers, nationwide interest was taken in his plight. How this interest was satisfied is a story in itself. The telephone company, on its own initiative, installed a telephone at the scene of the action and this telephone was held in constant use for eight hours in succession by reporters who kept in direct communication with their office up to the time the man was released. Some thirty reporters representing papers and news syndicates all over New England, covered the story, keeping on duty throughout the time the man was held a prisoner.

"TELEPHONE BARK"

The impersonal, cold, aggressive way in which some people answer the telephone is termed by a store in the South as "telephone bark." This store, which is an extensive advertiser and, as a result, does a large share of its business over the telephone, requires its employees to use a courteous, inviting voice over the telephone and has succeeded completely in banning the "bark."

Salinas Bovines Have Scented Breath

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO—January 17—The "sweet breath of the kine" in Salinas was found to be awful this week. Not only their breath, but the milk took on the stench. Worried about "halitosis" a frantic Salinas Valley dairyman sent an S. O. S. to Dr. J. P. Iverson, chief of the State Bureau of Animal Industry.

Garlic proved to be the villain wrecking the local milk industry and the bossy cows now are being made to sign the pledge to abstain from the "noxious weed" on pain of being deported to Italy.

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, January 18 — Fair plans for the 1928 State Fair are already well under way today with the specifications for the new $1000,000 machinery building authorized this week by the directors of the State Agricultural Society following a conference with State Architect George B. McDougall.

The board also has approved plans for a new water main system for the fair grounds and the remodeling of the manufacturers' building, including installation of a new concrete floor.

Skyline Appropriation Gets Federal Sanction

That $350,000 would be appropriated by congress for the extension of the Skyline road was reported in a telegram received this week in San Francisco by friends of Congressman Richard Welsh from Welsh who is now in Washington. An appropriation of $300,000 has already been appropriated by the state of California contingent upon the granting of the federal appropriation.

The next unit of the road will be from the present termination at the La Honda road to Saratoga Gap. Work will probably be started on this unit during this year.

INSURANCE MEN USED TELEPHONE IN ITS INFANCY

Newspaper Account Tells How Dr. Bell's Father "Signed on Dotted Line" by Wire

When the telephone was just a mere infant, Alexander M. Bell had occasion to realize the usefulness of his son's invention. An old newspaper clipping was recently uncovered by the Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., which describes how the telephone was used in the fall of 1877 in arranging for Mr. Bell to obtain insurance. That the instrument could be put to such utilitarian purposes seems to have attracted considerable attention at the time, the newspaper clipping recently unearthed reading as follows:

"The Telephone proves quite handy in transacting insurance business. In the latter part of October, Messrs. H. Haskell and J. B. Moore, special agents for The Travelers, tried it at Brantford, Ont. Being at the residence of Rev. Thos. Henderson, they received the application for an accident policy of Prof. A. M. Bell, (father of Prof. A. G. Bell of Boston University, and inventor of the telephone), who was at that time in his own house at Tutelo Heights, four miles distant. All the necessary questions were asked and answered through the telephone, being distinctly heard and understood. The agents having never before made the acquaintance of Prof. Bell, were introduced by means of the same instrument. This, we think, is the latest novelty in accident insurance, and a fresh demonstration of the usefulness of Prof. Bell's invention. It is not only capable of transmitting the human voice over long distances instantaneously, but preserves every articulation distinctly, and is no doubt destined ere long to be of great practical value. Its universal adoption will make the world one vast whispering-gallery. Canvassing agents will then be scarcely needed, as every one can talk directly with the Home Office."

STAYS ON DUTY WITH OWN HOME IN FLAMES

Miss Anna Williams, telephone operator at Greenview, Ill., was on duty alone at the local exchange when a call came through indicating that her own home was on fire. Despite the fact that her invalid mother could not move her wheel chair without help and that her sister could not leave without assistance, the operator showed a rare devotion to duty by staunchly remaining at her board and reporting the fire in the customary way, until someone came to relieve her. Fortunately, the cool-headed young woman was rewarded with the greatest boon—the safety of her loved ones, for the fire was extinguished and no one was injured.

PRISON CAMP LABOR TO BE USED ON ROAD

Plans Made for Expansion of Prison Camp System

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, January 18 — California's two-fold venture in "building men and roads," an enterprise in which this state has pioneered the way for the nation, will be enlarged during the coming summer to provide work for at least 1,000 men on nine separate projects, Bert B. Meek, director of the State Department of Public Works, indicated this week in announcing plans for expansion of the prison highway camp system.

Expansion of the convict camp program, Meek pointed out, will expedite construction on important projects requiring a great deal of man-labor, will help to solve San Quentin Prison's congestion problem and will also permit a greatly increased number of convicts to build up a "stake" toward their new start in civilian life.

Of the $47,169,512 appropriated by the State Highway Commission in its two-year budget, recently announced, $4,969,412 in federal aid money will go into the prison road camp jobs.

While only about 200 men are in the prison camps now, it is hoped to increase this number to 1,000 by summer with the possibility that eventually some 1500 or 2000 prisoners will become self supporting through the road work. Such a program, according to Meek, will minimize the possibility of riots and other outbreaks in the state's prisons, which often result in part from the fact that thousands of prisoners are idle for the major part of the day.

Here are the projects on which prison labor will be used:

Trinity Lateral.
Red Bluff-Susanville-Purdy Lateral.
Redding-Alturas Lateral.
Tahoe-Ukiah Highway.
Yosemite Lateral.
Carmel-San Simeon Highway.
Feather River Lateral.
Kings River Canyon Highway.
Ridge Route Re-location.

Suisun—U. S. airway officials lease 100 acres at Denverton for airport.

$200,000 new branch factory of Kellogg Cereal Company to be built in California.

Tracy — Beginning March 1, Tracey will have free mail delivery service.

Burbank—Thundercraft Aircraft Co. is going into heavy airplane production.

Salinas — Building permits issued here during 1927 reached $1,213,402.

Oakdale — Surveys completed for 3 proposed reservoirs in the district.

Coastside Rum Runner Sentenced to 14 Months

A reputed lieutenant of Joe Parrente., arrested in Halfmoon Bay for rum running was sentenced to fourteen months in the county jail in Federal Judge Kerrigan's Court Monday. He is Fred Olsen, arrested June 10 by federal dry agents near Pigeon Point, where he was landing seventy-eight casks of whiskey from the Emma S., a launch alleged to have been owned by Parente. While out on bond in this case, Olsen was caught again on Halfmoon Bay guarding 228 sacks of whisky. Olsen pleaded guilty Monday to both charges of liquor conspiracy, and Judge Kerrigan decreed that sentence of eight months in the second case and six in the first should run consecutively.

Action toward the return of Parente to this country for trial was also begun this week by the San Francisco grand jury. Parente is now in Vancouver, Canada.

An indictment of Parente was voted by the San Francisco county grand jury on an extraditable offense—that of perjury in connection with his status as a qualified voter of that city.

The indictment returned against Parente last night was sought at last Monday's session of the Grand Jurors were told, but also taken at that time. The indictment accuses Parente of having voted at the last municipal election here after swearing to an affidavit that he was a legal and duly qualified elector.

According to information gathered by Detective Sergeant Thomas Hyland, Parente, in 1913, was sentenced from Butte county to seven years in San Quentin for forgery.

He later was paroled, but had not regained his citizenship, Hyland ascertained.

Parente not only voted as a citizen at the last election, the Grand Jurors were told, but also exercised hs alleged franchise at two former elections in San Francisco.

The indictment, it was learned, was sought at the instigation of McDonough Bros., bond brokers, who stand to lose $66,000 in bonds posted to insure Parente's appearance in Federal court on a series of rum-running indictments eturned against him.

Parente, on the eve of surrendering to United States Marshal Esola prior to beginning a two-year sentence in Federal prison in connection with the famous Principio rum-runing activites, jumped a $20,000 bail, posted by McDonough Bros., and next was heard of in Vancouver.

Parente, on his arrival in Vancouver, was taken into custody by immigration authorities on the ground he is an undesirable citizen in that country. He was released on bail and his hearing on deportation charges set for tomorrow.

Food for Thought

What is the definition of a sure-thing?

Something you can bank upon!
For instance:

Can you always bank upon having good health? Well, hardly.

And yet, uncertainties in matters of health, are of all things the most harmful. It is easy to see why. Because any reduction in normal health tends to affect all other interests.

Health has a vital bearing on everything we do. Its importance cannot be overemphasized.

The CHIROPRACTOR COMES TO YOU WITH A STRAIGHTFORWARD PROPOSITION FOR SAFEGUARDING YOUR HEALTH. Something in the nature of a sure-thing. He can give you the nearest guarantee to good health that it is possible for science to do.

Considering the above statements in a broad and serious way, does it not appear wise to look into the claims of this great Drugless Scence?

In the long run, and in its best sense CHIROPRACTIC is a sure-thing that you can depend upon.

Will you make it your business to find out why, at once?

Idle Island

By ETHEL HUESTON

Copyright 1927 by The Bobbs-Merrill Co. WNU Service.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Delane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntaimiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." On an exploration of the island Gay, standing on the seashore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nerves herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay makes her way to the "Captain" with the story. Returning with him to the shore, they find no body there, and Gay's story of the incident is set down to an attack of "nerves." Gay, unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks her to let him take it, but Gay refuses. Next day Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, surprises Gay at household tasks. Gay's acquaintance with Rand ripens into affection. Rand leaves the island on business. Gay determines to stay for the winter.

"Didn't he ever come back?"

"He did., dearie. Died away. But I had Buddy then. But Buddy went, too. Could I have a little more sugar, dearie?"

That was all. They talked of other things. Auntaimiry's gentle interest was just as it had always been, her easy amiability, but after that flush of feverish hope she seemed pale and worn with her age.

The next day Rand came, and they two, Gay and Rand, drifted into a routine of joyous companionship and love. Frankly and trustfully they professed full sympathy and understanding in each other's whims. Gay loved to be in love, but brooked no thought of marriage, demanding freedom, she said, freedom for work. Rand, too, admitted satisfaction in the arrangement, craving freedom from the very thing that she desired, freedom for freedom's sake, he called it.

It sometimes Gay wondered if love built on foundation so slight could long endure, she hushed her doubts. She was very happy, and she dreamed of long years of this same happiness for both, freedom for each for the things that each desired. She would come to him, he would come to her, they would summer together in this cool and lovely place.

September drew swiftly, goldenly toward its close. September is the death of summer in the northland. The hotels on the island were already closed for the season, the summer shops locked into their storm windows, the shore cottages deserted. Still Gay lingered. Between herself and Rand had been no suggestion of parting, no hint that the season was over, the time of separation at hand. The island was lovely in September, lovely and wistful and wilting. Gay would not let herself think of leaving.

She sat alone in her window-seat one afternoon and watched the sunset as it faded swiftly and darkness crept over the sand. An hour passed, two hours. The dusk had deepened to night. And then, with one of her impulsive changes, she sprang to her feet, wanting brightness, wanting light. With her hand outstretched to press the button, she stopped, suddenly motionless, holding her breath.

Pressed hard against her window on the eastern side, the side of the forest, she saw it again, that face of yellow parchment with the seamed scar beneath the slanting eyes. As she looked it faded away into the darkness from which it had come.

With its disappearance came sudden activity, flaming anger.

She ran to the window and flung it wide.

"Hello," she called. "Hello there!"

There was no answer to her call, but, staring intently, she saw among the shadows of the wood one shadow that moved silently farther into the recesses of the forest, and merged at last into black. She closed the window thoughtfully, locked it and lowered the blinds.

Gay had a pistol, a handsome monogrammed one, which it was her pleasant conceit to keep loaded, well conditioned, ready for emergency use in the drawer of her desk near at hand. She had bought it during that memorable year abroad on one of her venturesome visits to London pawnshops, and with a sort of boyish vanity had carried it with her ever since. But it is indicative of the absolute confidence of her nature that in an emergency she always entirely forgot the weapon, reverting to the more feminine defense of screaming, calling or locking doors.

When she saw the yellow face at her window she did not so much as think of the boasted pistol, which she affectionately dubbed the Baby, until she was safe behind the lowered blinds. Then she opened the drawer and looked at it.

"You're a useless old thing," she said impatiently. "Why don't you go off when there is some occasion for you, and scare the Peeping Toms?"

Expecting Rand, who came at his own caprice and kept her alert with expectation, she was not startled when, an hour later, there was a light knock at her door. It was past nine o'clock, but as his hours always suited his convenience, she only smiled tolerantly at his tardiness as she opened the door. But when she saw in the shadow, not Rand, but Ronald Ingram, she was startled into a little frightened cry, for which she quickly apologized with friendly laughter.

"Oh, you startled me. I—I was expecting some one else. Do come in. I am glad to see you again."

"What luck to find you," Ronald Ingram said with a warmth there was no mistaking. "I had no idea you would still be here. You are rather outstaying the summer, are you not?"

"Well—yes—a little, perhaps. But I was—quite ill, and I need—oh, a great deal of rest." Her face flushed with her feverish explanations, and Ronald Ingram studied her keenly.

"So many of the summer people have gone," he said slowly. "I should think you would be afraid to stay on alone. Especially after your experiences here. Was it in this room you saw the light—that night after you found the body in the cove?"

"Yes. In that window, right there."

"And the hand? Are you sure of that hand? Stretched out—"

"Of course I am sure. And when I came up in the morning, the sketch was gone. It was here, in this drawer." She lightly pulled out the drawer of the desk. Her pistol, bust

'Didn't He Ever Come Back?"

nesslike, important, lay in full sight "It was here. And the next morning it was gone. Doors locked, windows barred, just as I left them. But the sketch was gone. So I knew the poor dear wished to be left in peace and undisturbed."

"By George, you make my hair stand on end. And after all that, you stay on here, alone, unprotected—"

"Oh, he was a gentle spirit. He would not harm me."

He smiled and dropped the subject. He said he had come to Portland on business, and had come to the island with only a faint hope that he might find her, or, failing to find her, to get her address in the city. He said he could not bear to drop the little acquaintanceship, which to him had proved so sweetly charming.

Then he went quickly away, waving back to her as she stood in the lighted doorway beneath the tall pine.

Gay waited about for a while, hoping still that Rand would come, but finally she went upstairs and kicked off her slippers rather crossly. When, a little later, she heard his quick knock on the door below, and his blithe whistle above it, she caught up her slippers in her hand and ran downstairs, laughing, to let him in.

"Oh, good!" she cried. "A minute later and I'd have been in bed."

"I'd have been earlier, but—I was detained. You are all right, are you? Nothing has happened—yo' haven't seen anything unusual?"

Gay sensed an undertone of anxiety beneath the lightness of his voice.

"Why, of course I'm all right. Of course nothing has happened. Why not? Or why?"

"Well, I saw a chap hanging about in the woods near your windows, sort of spying, sneaking around. I started up to see who it was, and he ran. Of course I chased him, and the two of us have hot-footed it all over the island. He was playing with me. Got me down to the city landing, and dropped me like a hot cake. You haven't—"

"Oh, that must have been the Chinaman!"

"The Chinaman!" Rand's amazement was unbounded. "The Chinaman! What under heaven—"

"Oh, I must have told you about the Chinaman," she said evasively.

"You know darned well you never have. What about him?"

"Well, come and sit down. It's a long story— You are quite sure I haven't told you?"

Rand laughed. "Quite sure, you little liar, and so are you."

"Well, you weren't here when I came in. I was so tired, and sick. I was a perfect wreck. Auntaimiry was here, and while she packed up I lay down on the couch here, and slept. Slept! It was the sleep of death for weariness.—She wakened me for dinner, and I ate, and went to sleep again. So she went away and left me sleeping.—Well, it was evening. And I felt— You know how one feels things in one's sleep?—I felt eyes looking at me. I could hardly squeeze a look out beneath my lids, for the weariness. But I did. And in the dusk, faint and yellow, I saw the face of a Chinaman, thin pinched features, slanting eyes and a small seared scar beneath one eye. As I looked, the face just melted backward into the darkness, so I knew it was a dream, and went to sleep again."

Rand lighted a cigarette hastily but said nothing, and Gay went on.

"Well, you know how sometimes I sit, just dreaming, as the sun sets, until it is dark.—I did tonight. And I jumped up suddenly to light the lights, although it was not entirely dark, and I saw it at my window, that window—same face, the very same. So it could not have been a dream."

"When was that?"

"Oh, hours ago! Just before the final darkness."

"But it was late when I found him—about an hour ago.—In the meantime, what? Any noises? Were you afraid—"

"No, Mr. Ingram was here."

Rand flecked the ashes from his cigarette thoughtfully. "Ah, Mr. Ingram.—Mr. Ingram.—I suppose you told me all about him, too. May one inquire, who is Mr. Ingram?"

"He is the man who— It was he who— It was Mr. Ingram who—" Gay closed her lips stubbornly. She had often wished to tell him of the affair in the cove, but resentment had always forbidden the confidence. He should have asked her. She glanced at him furtively. His chin was set, and his eyes were anxious. Gay relented.

"Well, Rand, I suppose the faithful females told you—what happened in the cove?"

Rand smiled faintly, his fingers caressed her arm. Gay hardened again.

"I know they thought I was out of my head, but you surely do not believe any such nonsense."

"They thought you saw driftwood a log or a barrel."

"How about my handkerchief? Did they think I put it on a piece of driftwood?"

"They thought— Now, remember, Gay, you did not mention the handkerchief until they reported there was no body. They thought—well, they thought you made it up to sort of carry out your story, make it hold water."

"What did you think?"

"I thought," he said tenderly, "that some time, in a moment of great confidence, my Gay would tell me about herself, and then I should know all."

Gay laughed, bent suddenly and kissed his hand. "You work me outrageously," she said.

"And Mr. Ingram—" he prompted softly.

"Well, then.—No, the cove comes first.—The reason I like Mr. Ingram is because if he is interested in anything, he talks about it. If he wants to know anything, he asks. He doesn't think other people are crazy just because they happened to see something he didn't happen to see himself.—Like the state of Maine," she said vindictively.

"And the cove—"

"Well, then, I slid down the rocks into the cove."

"Why, Gay, why? With a whole island full of accessible shore, why slide down the worst cliff in the bay?"

"Because I thought I couldn't," she answered promptly. "Because everybody said one couldn't go down.—So I did."

Rand rolled his eyes heavenward. "A woman," he said devoutly. "Is heaven's greatest miracle.—She did, because she couldn't.—Go on.—Like your Mr. Ingram, I understand perfectly."

"Well, I tried to get into the clubhouse, and I couldn't. And into the boathouse, and I couldn't."

"You should have burned them to the ground.—If you couldn't get in, you should have."

Gay laughed. "Don't be silly.—Well, it was lovely in the cove, and I stood there and saw—It—coming in.—Rand, it was a man. He came in and with my two hands I pulled him up on the sand. There was a rope about one ankle, a stout rope, with one end dangling loose. He had been shot in the temple—here." She touched her brow with a slender finger. "The blood was washed away, but the hair was clotted about it. I laid his hand upon his breast, and put my handkerchief over his face. I called for help, but of course nobody heard me. So I went for the Captain. You know what happened."

Rand was impressed. She could see that

"It sounds very—reasonable."

"Oh, Rand! When I went back the sand was wet where the body had lain. I showed it to the Captain, and he said it had splashed there. It couldn't have splashed. It hadn't splashed anywhere else."

"And Mr. Ingram—"

Gay smiled at his persistence. "Well, I sent the captain away. I could see every line of the poor, tired, anxious face, and the long fine hand, and the drenched hair. I took my drawing pad, and drew it, line for line. I was going to send it to the police department, so they could try to trace him.—Mr. Ingram was looking for a way down to the shore, and I went up and took him back through the woods the other way. I showed him the sketch, and he was greatly interested. He wanted it. He is a newspaper man."

"And now he comes again—"

"Oh, he came before—"

"Oh, I see." Rand's voice was quizzical.

"Oh, no, you don't see. Well, I met him on the rocks beyond the Little club one day—he is very nice, so gentle, gentlemanly, sympathetic—so I brought him home, and we had a long talk. He was thinking of buying up part of the island for exploitation, to build and sell, you know, things like that. He is very nice."

Rand's face was very stern. "Why didn't you tell me all this before?" he demanded curtly.

"Because if you want to be so darned close about everything, I will be darned close myself," she said smartly. "Rand, he felt terrible about the sketch.—Oh, I didn't tell you about that."

"What? What about it? What did the police—"

"Now, Rand, now is your chance to decide once and for all that I was entirely out of my head—am still, perhaps— But Auntaimiry can swear to part of it, if she will, though she made me promise not to tell. She said folks would think queer of it."

"Gay!"

In Memory of a Martyr

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JANUARY 29 carnations will adorn the buttonholes of thousands of Americans who will thus be carrying on a unique tradition in honoring the memory of a President of the United States. February 12 and February 22 are set aside in our patriotic calendar for reverent tribute to the names of Lincoln and Washington. October 27, Roosevelt's birthday, is often observed as Navy day, thus recalling his part in building up our first line of defense. But January 29 is a date for remembering not so much those elements of statesmanship which twice made him Chief Executive of his country as it is for remembering the simple, kindly soul that was the man named William McKinley. Therefore this simple tribute of wearing his favorite flower on his birthday is singularly appropriate.

So swiftly has the world moved in the last quarter century that, to the present generation, at least, the name of the twenty-fourth President is comparatively unknown. His fame is greatly overshadowed by the dominating personality of his immediate successor, the "strenuous American," and by a still later strong personality of quite another sort, whose fortune it was to lead us in the greatest war this country has ever known. But to those of a previous generation the name of McKinley has a very definite meaning.

Its mention recalls to them that September day in 1901 when the word was flashed all over the country that an anarchist had shot the President as he stood in Music hall at the Pan-American exposition in Buffalo, N. Y., greeting the long line of his fellow-citizens who filed past him to shake his hand. They remember, too, how for the next week the whole nation watched his valiant fight for life; how he accepted the inevitable with the historic words, "Thy will, not ours, be done" and how, when the end came on September 14, his favorite hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee!" was the requiem of sorrow of thousands who mourned the loss of William McKinley, the President, but more the passing of William McKinley, the man, whose "perfect devotion to his invalid wife had excited universal admiration."

So America added a third name to make its trinity of martyred Presidents, and as it did so little realized that it was definitely writing "Finis" to an era in American history. Little wonder that the present generation has almost forgotten him and his times! For in at least one important respect, the day of William McKinley is as remote from the present as is the day of Abraham Lincoln or even of Andrew Jackson. The year 1900 was more than the "turn of the century" for the United States. For 110 years America had been concerned with its own internal affairs, with the problems of forming a union out of a group of jealous and wrangling colonies lately freed from European domination, of conquering a wilderness and expanding westward until the land hunger of its people was satisfied, of preserving the nation from disunion and healing the wounds of civil strife. But when on the 25th of April, 1898, congress passed a resolution, declaring war between "the United States of America and the Kingdom of Spain," it marked the end of America's "splendid isolation," the beginning of its concern with external affairs and its assumption of a place of importance in the congress of nations.

So the historical importance of William McKinley is that he was a guiding force in turning the American ship of state from the sometimes troubled waters of nationalism into the ever-turbulent waters of internationalism in which it seems destined to sail henceforth. What was the historic background of the man cast for this role and his preparation for his task? Not in the least the kind that a prophet would have called appropriate for the result to be attained. But it was apparently the kind that only a democracy such as ours could produce. For the man whom Fate had selected to be leader of the nation at this turning point in the relation of the United States to the outside world was an Ohio school teacher and lawyer who had served faithfully but with no especial brilliance in the Civil war and who had risen by the successive steps of prosecuting attorney, congressman, and governor to the Presidency. "Emphatically not a leader," writes Carl Russell Fish in his volume, "The Path of Empire," in the Yale University Press' "Chronicles of America," and continues: "He was, however, unsurpassed in his day as a reader of public opinion and he believed his function to be that of interpreting the national mind. Nor did he yield his opinion in a grudging manner. He grasped broadly the consequences of each new position which the public assumed and he was a master of securing harmonious co-operation for a desired end."

Of him another biographer has written:

"President McKinley's course during the many exciting events of his administration was marked by a degree of tact, prudence and foresight which surprised even his friends. He surrounded himself with able advisers, maintained cordial relations with congress and steadily grew in popularity with the country at large. He possessed to an unusual degree the faculty of forecasting public sentiment."

In the light of these estimates it would appear that McKinley, even though he did not have that training in statecraft which might be considered essential to a situation involving international relations, was apparently an ideal leader for a people once they had entered upon a war which was to be so momentous in their history. It was a war which he was opposed to and during all the negotiations with Spain, that preceded the actual outbreak of war, he repeatedly counseled patience and restraint. Even after the destruction of the Maine, when the country was in a white heat of indignation against Spain, he held fast to his purpose of securing a peaceful settlement of the dispute between the two countries over the Cuban problem. Finally, convinced that Spain would not accept America's proposals and assured of the deep-seated conviction of the American people regarding their duty to the Cubans, the President reluctantly took the decisive step.

Not only did the Spanish-American war, the highlight of McKinley's administration, result in America's coming into possession of colonies in the Far East which brought the country into the realm of international politics, but during that administration were taken also the other steps which aided in furthering her interests in world-wide affairs. It was McKinley's secretary of state, John Hay, whose "open door" policy in regard to China made the United States an active factor in the future of the Orient and it was McKinley himself, whose proposal in 1899 for a Pan-American congress, who made the first overtures for a better understanding among the American republics, North and South. It was to popularize the Pan-American idea that the exposition, where the President received his death wound, was arranged, and it was just after he had set forth his views on the ties which should bind the two continents that he was shot.

Today a magnificent memorial stands in his home city of Canton, Ohio, as the tribute of that state and the nation as well to a beloved leader. Historians of the future may point to his administration as the most significant turning point in all American history, and as time gives a better perspective for evaluation of his importance, President William McKinley may loom larger and larger in the gallery of American notables. But for the American people, whom he understood as few Presidents have, the best tribute that they can pay him is the simple tribute on January 29 of each year of honoring his memory with a simple thing—his favorite flower.

Nearer, My God, to Thee!

Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me;
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!

Though like the wanderer,
The sun gone down,
Darkness be over me,
My rest a stone,
Yet in my dreams I'd be
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!

There let the way appear,
Steps unto heaven!
All that Thou send'st to me
In mercy given:
Angels to beckon me
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!

Then, with my waking thoughts
Bright with Thy praise,
Out of my stony griefs
Bethel I'll raise;
So by my woes to be
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!

Or if on joyful wing
Cleaving the sky,
Sun, moon and stars forgot,
Upwards I fly,
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee!

Land in Dispute

"Cook's Croft," made famous by Dick Turpin, is the cause of a dispute between the British ministry of agriculture and the rector of Fawkham, England. The land has two owners, yet in a sense is no man's land, because it is in no parish, and the rector refuses to collect any tithes from it. Part of it has been sold and the ministry of agriculture wishes to reapportion it for tithes, but the rector claims that as it has never been apportioned it therefore cannot be reapportioned and no one can claim it. In 1700, the spot was called "Three Gates" because of three gates that stood under an old tree in the lonely spot. Turpin stood under the tree when he robbed the Gravesend coach.

Famous Breed of Cattle

Friesian cattle were mentioned by the Roman historian Tacitus as being of importance as early as the year 28 A. D. Perhaps because of this early start, or by reason of the favorable location of the province in regard to industrial cities of northern Europe, Friesland farmers have grown prosperous through many years of furnishing their neighbors with butter and cheese.

Presidential Bodyguards

The use of bodyguards by Presidents of the United States dates back to Andrew Johnson who was the first American President to go around guarded.

Interesting Spire

Since the fall some years ago of the great Campanile at Venice scientific experiments have been made to afford assurance of the stability of other famous architectural piles in Italy.

Among these is the unique cathedral of Milan, built all of marble, with scores of slender pinnacles and a lofty main spire terminating in a great marble statue of the Virgin. The experiments on this spire, while demonstrating its complete stability, show interesting effects of the wind and solar rays. As with other lofty towers, the point of the spire describes daily an elliptical curve, the size and precise form of which vary with atmospheric conditions. But the greatest displacement seldom amounts to more than a single minute of arc, in this case less than a third of an inch. A tempest of uncommon violence in 1922 displaced the top of the spire eight millimeters.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Receives Honor Long Delayed

Here are Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hopkins of Roonton, N. J., admiring the Congressional Medal of Honor and a citation for distinguished gallantry under fire during the Civil war that were awarded Hopkins 62 years ago, but which had just reached him. The delay of the award was due to the veteran's reluctance to apply personally for the honor. The couple have just celebrated the sixty-first anniversary of their wedding.

"Radio" Nearing Century Mark

Chicago.—Radio, once known as "wireless" underwent a process of elimination before the present radiation system was adopted. This method was preceded by two others, in which attempts at sending without wires were made by conduction and induction.

The conduction system was discovered by Professor Steinheil, a German inventor, in 1838. He stumbled upon it when experimenting with steel rails in an endeavor to substitute them for telegraph wires. He found that by using only one telegraph wire, with the earth as the return circuit, telegraph instruments functioned as well as with two wires. This method still is in use.

Steinheil next tried to telegraph solely through the earth. This experiment is said to be the first successful attempt to telegraph without wires, and 50 feet were covered.

S B Morse, inventor of wire telegraphy and telegraph code, followed up Steinheil's experiments and in 1844 transmitted messages across a canal 75 feet wide. This was accomplished by two metal conductors in each side of the canal. By the insertion of a battery between the two underwater plates a current was carried across the canal with the water as the conductor. Three miles was the greatest distance reached.

Professor Dolbear of Tufts college, Salem, in 1882 invented an induction transmission device. By this method an electrical influence exerted by a charged body or by a magnetic field is sent to neighboring bodies without wires. Professor Dolbear was able to transmit both telegraph and voice.

The radiation method is used today in both broadcasting and commercial radio. It comprises a means of disturbing the ether so that a series of electrical waves are produced. Marconi was a pioneer in this field.

Hope for Humans Seen in Cures of Rat Cancer

London.—Much interest is shown in medical circles here in a description in the Lancet by Dr. Thomas Lumsden, working under the British empire cancer campaign, of cures of cancer in rats. This line of research obviously is followed in the hope of finding a treatment for human cancers but Doctor Lumsden refrains from mentioning the application of the method to human beings.

Briefly, Doctor Lumsden's method of attack on rat cancer consists of local injections of formalin, which damage the cancer cells in such a way that their vitality is destroyed without simultaneous destruction of their antigenic constituent—that is to say their virulence is removed, leaving a substance which is actively hostile to other cancer cells. Their substance. Doctor Lumsden says, is then absorbed into the blood and acts as an anti-cancer serum, "contemplating the cure of the treated tumor and preventing a recurrence."

Athough only small tumors can be treated by this method, Doctor Lumsden has had remarkable success, having cured 96 per cent of the rats treated by him since October. He hints at further developments by mentioning the possibility that some other substance more effective than either formalin or the anti-serum may be discovered.

100,000,000 Records of War Being Filed

Washington.—Progress in the classifying and filing of approximately 100,000,000 documents which the World war added to the records of the office of the adjutant general of the army has been reported by the War department.

The mass of documents includes not only the individual records of men in the army, but the correspondence and other papers of all the war-time camps, the forces in France and Siberia and the Army of Occupation in Germany. With the exception of the records of general headquarters in France and the Army of Occupation, all were received after the war in various conditions of disarrangement.

Baron, Wife, Renounce Title for Citizenship

Providence, R. I.—Valuing American citizenship above their place in Hungarian nobility, Baron and Baroness Francois De Levay De Wolf have sworn allegiance to the United States.

The baron is a grand-nephew of the late Senator La Baron B. Colt of Rhode Island, and as a lieutenant in the Austrian army during the World war he won five decorations for bravery. He came to America with his bride, Edith von Magyar of Budapest, in 1922, at the invitation of his maternal grandfather, Francis E. De Wolf of Bristol, R. I., and when his grandfather died in 1924 the will left the baron a legacy on condition that he change his name to De Wolf, which he did.

The baron and baroness—now just Mr. and Mrs. F. D. De Wolf—are living at Bristol. They explain that neither cared about titles and that both wanted to become Americans.

Nation's Forest Acreage Large

Richmond, Va.—Virginia's forest area comprises 12,000,000 acres, according to a statistical survey compiled by Dr. Wilson Gee and J. J. Corson of the University of Virginia. Twenty states have a greater acreage in forest. Of these Oregon is first with 23,275,000 acres of her land area known as forest land.

Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia and Minnesota have more than 20,000,000 acres covered with timber.

In 1925 Virginia held sixteenth place in the amount of lumber cut, with a total of 709,180 feet, board measure. Washington cut the most, 7,027,325 feet, while Oregon was second with 4,216,383. Eleven other states cut more than 1,000,000 feet of lumber that year. They were Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, California, Nevada, Arkansas, Texas, Georgia, Idaho, Wisconsin and North Carolina.

Rhode Island cut the smallest amount of lumber, only 3,686 feet. Utah, Kansas, Delaware and New Jersey were the only other states to cut less than 10,000 feet.

Rhode Island also has the smallest area of her land in timber, 280,000 acres being listed as forest land. Delaware is next with 390,000 acres in forest.

Total land in timber in the United States is 469,475,000 acres, while 38,338,641 feet of timber were cut in all the states during 1925.

THE MAN WHO VOLUNTEERS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I WAS in the hospital nursing an inflamed shoulder when Bert and George called on me to help make the hours pass a little more rapidly. I could read even though I was lying on my back, and there was one particular magazine which I very much desired. It was in the news stands, I knew, and probably would not be there very long.

"Is there anything I can get for you?" Bert asked me. "I'd be glad to get it."

"I would like a copy of the last House Beautiful," I said. "There's an article in it by a friend of mine that I want to read."

"There's a news stand just around the corner," Bert said. "I'll go out and get a copy for you now."

"You don't care for it tonight, do you?" George asked. It was already nearly time for them to go and for me to try to get to sleep.

"Oh, no," I answered. "I just want to be sure not to miss it."

"Frank is coming out here tomorrow at eight," George explained, "and I'll have him bring you our copy. We don't care for it. It's too bad to take Bert away just now when we have only a few minutes more to visit."

It was indeed, and I acquiesced quite willingly. But I never saw the magazine next morning nor after wards. I knew George very well and just how generous and impulsive and thoughtless he is. I suppose he has never thought of it again. Having taken the responsibility his obligation passed completely out of his mind. With Bert it was different.

"Did you get that magazine you asked about?" he inquired the next time he dropped in to see me.

"I'm sorry I didn't," I had to confess.

"Well, I was afraid George would forget all about it," he explained. "so I brought one along." The obligation which he had momentarily assumed he carried in his mind until he could check up on the other man who had essayed to take it off his shoulders. It goes without saying that Bert is a good business man whom his clients know they can depend upon.

The telephone rang before I was up Sunday morning. When I got down stairs it was Goodwin who wanted to talk to me.

"I'm sorry to disturb you and especially on Sunday morning," he began—they always begin that way when I am roused at some inopportune time—"but we are just ready to initiate four new men, and I find that Gordon, who was to see about the proper permission, has forgotten to attend to it."

Whenever your friend or your roommate or a fraternity brother or a chance caller volunteers enthusiastically to do a service for you, don't depend upon it too confidently unless you know the person thoroughly. It is easier to promise than to fulfill.

Scotch Fish Board Guards Herring Beds

Glasgow, Scotland.—There are as good fish in the sea as ever were caught, but not quite so many herring in the opinion of the Scottish fishery board.

The practice of catching and curing immature herring for the export trade has done a great deal toward reducing the numbers of this fish the board has concluded. With a view of protecting young herring a closed season is to be decided and the board will request co-operation of the heads of the fishing industry.

Many millions of herring have been caught this season and at times have retailed in London and other cities for half a penny each, or about one for an American cent.

Somehow the neighbors always think the sad look on a married woman's face is due to her husband.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

No Spanish Colors for Haitian General

During the reign of the Emperor Soulouque in Haiti one of his generals wrote to an eminent oculist in Paris for a glass eye. The oculist flattered himself that a successful eye would secure for him one of the Haitian crosses; so he devoted himself to the production of a work of art.

Six months elapsed. Then a small box reached him from Haiti. A cross glistened in his imagination, but, to his horror, within the folds of cotton was his work of art. A letter accompanied the box.

"Sir," it ran, "he eye you forwarded to me is of a tint that resembles that of the Spanish flag, and I am too patriotic to wear any but the colors of my country."

The oculist proceeded at once to the admiralty, there ascertained the colors of the Haitian flag, and at once manufactured a scarlet and green eye, which he forwarded at the earliest opportunity.

Squirrels Badly Fooled

The squirrels that abound in the environs of Ottawa park, Toledo, Ohio, must have had a disappointment when they opened their stores of nuts this winter. They have been garnering golf balls from the golf course at the park. To prove this, some golfers placed a number of slightly soiled balls on a fairway and then hid behind a clump of bushes. Sure enough, a few moments later a number of squirrels darted out into the open and dashed away, leaving not a single ball.

Wise Bird

Tiny, a pet canary, flew out of his cage while Mr. and Mrs. R. C. King of Kansas City, Mo., were driving at night through Lawrence, Kan. The Kings spent hours searching for the bird, then drove toward home. The next night they returned to Lawrence, hoping to find Tiny in the morning. While Mrs. King visited a Lawrence newspaper office to advertise for the lost bird, Tiny flew through the open window of the newspaper's counting room and alighted on the shoulder of an employee and was caught.

Bird Finally Got Home

King Avalon, a homing pigeon, owned by Frank Maderos of Martinez, Calif., was loosed in Nevada for a race to Martinez, four years ago. After weeks had passed and the bird had not returned Maderos gave the bird up as lost, probably the prey of a hawk or hunter. But the bird has returned, very tired and apparently from a long flight, and has refused to leave its loft.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

Washington.—Have you a daughter who must go to work this year? Will you like it if she has to work long hours each day, until she loses that healthy youth you have spent so many years building for her?

These are questions put to American mothers by Miss Mary Winslow economic analyst and director of special studies for the women's bureau of the United States Department of Labor, who has completed a nation-wide study of the regulation of hours of work for women.

"Are you resting secure in the knowledge that your state has already said she shall not work longer than 48 hours a week, and that she shall not work at night at all?" asks Miss Winslow.

"Oh have you heard tales about that 48-hour law? Have you heard that it may keep her from getting any job at all, because employers don't want to have to stop work at the end of an eight-hour day?"

Debated by Thousands.

Thousands of people throughout the United States have been discussing and debating the question of regulating women's work.

The largest of two opposing groups led by the working women themselves, including such organizations as the National Women's Trade Union league, the League of Women Voters the Young Women's Christian association, the Consumers' league, the National Council of Catholic Women and the General Federation of Women's Clubs, believe in the necessity of regulation because, they say, women are largely unorganized and so more liable to exploitation than men.

The other group, much smaller but very active, has been led by the National Women's party, which is sponsoring the "equal rights amendment" in Washington.

According to Miss Winslow's findings, legislation to protect women workers in industry has not harmed them. With practically no exceptions, the few handicaps resulting from protective legislation have occurred only in a small number of special occupations—in which normally few women are employed—and in semiprofessional work, such as that of pharmacists, proofreaders, etc., where legislation is largely unnecessary, due to the more individual character of the work and to the greater training required.

"In the course of our investigation," she reports, "we were continually impressed by the fact that what is needed is not the abolition of existing or proposed laws, but the more careful rewriting of those laws. There is all the difference in the world between legislation that regulates the employment of women and that which prohibits it. Certain adaptations must be made in order to fit special cases Laws need to be cut to the measure of the individual situations in the different states.

Find Women Necessary.

"The women's bureau study has already shown that women are necessary to industry and that reasonable legal standards for their employment do not bar them from industrial work. In fact, that the great majority of up-to-date employers realize the value of such standards and often exceed them in their own plans. Many of them approve such legislation because it largely does away with the cheap unfair competition of unscrupulous employers."

The selection of Mary Winslow for this study came as a result of her own long experience with industrial problems. She was trained at the New York School of Social Work, and served first as a civil service appointee of New York city in the department of public charities.

During the war she was with the council of national defense in Washington, but after the armistice took the examination for the woman in industry service, which became the women's bureau in 1920. She is the author of ten of the bureau's publications.

MENLO PARK

Menlo Park

By Denis A. Merz

There is no other place so fair
As the city where I dwell,
It is admired ev'ry where
For it's beauty, known so well.
And if you ask me where it is,
I'll not keep you in the dark,
But name the city of great bliss,
It's my own dear Menlo Park.

Some people prefer the seashore,
Others for abroad embark,
But I prefer and do adore
My Beautiful dear Menlo Park.
It's the dearest place, my home,
A place of beauty's highest mark,
Where ev'ry body is welcome
To the dreams of Menlo Park.

So let us all do our duty,
And boost for our "city fair,"
Tell friends of all it's great beauty
And charms to be found ev'ry-where.

Let us all boost for our home town
Tell people, and make them hark,
Tell them we want it to be known,
That we love our dear Menlo Park.

N. D. G. W. to Give Card Parties

A series of four card parties will be given in the Menlo Park Masonic hall by Menlo Parlor, N. D. G. W. The first will be given on Wednesday evening, January 25, the others each week thereafter. Prizes will be given each night and a grand prize at the finish.

Mrs. J. Sinfield is about to start a delicatessen store in the Slinger building. She is to make a specialty of home cooking. Her pies and cakes will be just like mother used to make. It will be a modern store with the best of service and the finest of goods.

Father Duffey and not Father Foley, as stated last week, is the new assistant pastor at the Church of the Nativity. He has just been ordained and is a young man of ability and devoted to his sacred calling. Preparations are already begun for the St. Patrick Day entertainment at the Hall of the Nativity. George Walsh is in charge of the arrangements.

Those desiring to vote at the school trustee election in March will have to register on or before February 29 and those to participate in the municipal election in April will have to register by March 10. Register now. Don't put it off. The registrars for Menlo Park are James G. Mason, Mrs. Fannie I. Kurtz and Miss Meta Kugeler.

Peninsula Girl to Make Debut

Miss Betty Downey, daughter of Mrs. Parry Cumberson of Menlo Park, is to make her debut this evening at a dinner dance which Mrs. Cumberson will give at the San Francisco Golf and Country Club. She is to be guest of honor at a series of luncheons to be given this week. Among those who are to entertain for her are Mrs. Alfred Stearns Holmes, Mrs. Spencer Buckbee and Mrs. John G. Sutton.

Miss Downe is an unusually pretty and charming girl with a host of friends among the younger set on the peninsula.

Council Meeting

The town council met in the city hall Tuesday evening and besides transacting the routine business went fully into the regional planning act passed by the last session of the legislature. The subject was brought up by a committee from North Palo Alto headed by Mrs. Mona Christensen who desired to know what action the council proposed to do in form ing a regional district. The members of the board desired information on the matter before taking action. Fred Reynolds, the North Palo Alto attorney, explained the roposed plan going somewhat into the legal aspect of the act. City Attorney Whitworth took the floor and went fully into the matter, demonstrating a good knowledge and a deep study of the question. He explained the law provided a city planning commission and a county planning commision, the members of which were appointed by the respective legisative bodies and said commissions had to do with their respective jurisdiction but that the regional plan was to organize a large territory taking in both counties and cities and work in conjunction with the other commissios in order to secure better results. A master plan was to be adopted that would be approved by the several commissions and all would work in harmony. That the nine regional commissioners are to be appointed by the governor who would hold meetings to grant permission for the formation of such regional districts. Mrs. Christensen said that Sunnyvale, Los Altos, Mountain View, Stanford and Palo Alto had taken steps to organize such a district and it was the hope of these local ties to have the southern part of San Mateo county join in order that all road and streets in the proposed district would harmonize. After considerable discussion the matter was laid over to give the council more time to consider it.

Carl Mabie, secretary of the Pulgas Abatement District, advised that the term of W. J. Murray as trustee, expired on January 14 and asking the council to make an appoitment. The matter was referred to the secretary to act.

J. E. Duff in a communication to the council asked for a permit to erect a two-story concrete building on his property near the Shell Oil Company's service on Santa Cruz avenue. The lower story to be used for offices. The letter was referred to the building inspector, J. J. Harcom.

The building ordinance was continued for another week to make further amendments to it.

The license ordinance was reintroduced after council had made numerous amendments.

The ordinance of fixing the salary of city judge at $25 a month, and that of the chief of police at $125 a month and fixing his bond at $1000 were introduced and adopted by the council.

The deliberation of the council were disturbed at times by a man who evidently had been imbibing too freely of bootleg whiskey. He thought the council ought to settle the Meixcan immigration question He was squelched by Mayor M. A. ... of Atherton who had been at the rear of the council chamber watching the proceedings of the board.

The council adjourned to meet next Tuesday night.

Held Over on Felony Charge

Peter V. Young on last Friday was held over to appear before the Superior Court of the county by Judge McAuliffe on a felony charge. He arrived here last Friday and hired Tony's taxi to convey him to the Base hospital. Near the institution, he drew a pistol and ordered Tony to shell out the contents of his pocket which he did to the tune of $35. Young was afterwards caught at Palo Alto. He is an exconvict from Texas, his native state.

Duck Season Closes Jan. 15

The season for hunting durks will close on the night of the 15th of January. All hunters report a very poor season. Few birds came from the north, owing perhaps, to the mild weather in the northern regions. There were a dearth of birds on the local hunting grounds where large bags were secured in other years.

"Pin Money" for the Youngsters

Over two thousand people in this city read the Times-Gazette every Friday. It is the only paper in the county giving complete Menlo Park news, hence its popularity in this section. There are some, however, who do not get it. We want them to take it and we will make a proposition to the youngsters of the community. Any youngster who brings in a new yearly subscription to the Times-Gazette, between now and March 1, will be given $1 of the $2.50, the yearly price of the subscription. This is a good way to secure "pin" money. Get busy boys and girls.

Two Hunters Acquitted of Night Hunting Charges

William Jensen and William Wisnom, well known sportmen of San Mateo, appeared in the court of Justice of the Peace Edward McAuliffe Wednesday morning on charges of hunting after dark. The two men were arrested by deputy game wardens, J. M. Hughes and George Defani of Palo Alto.

After hearing the evidence Justice McAuliffe dismissed the charges, as the arresting officers could not prove that the shooting for which the men were arrested had occured after sun set. The defendants were represented by Attorneys Ross & Ross of this city.
